Mrs. LaFrance

Mrs. Lafrance is the embodiment of Environmental Science at IHS. She decided to teach because she loved being outdoors in nature and felt she could share that experience with her students. She is widely loved in Ipswich for her inspiring environmental work and uplifting attitude. She offers her students ample opportunities to explore science out in the field: from trips to the beach to learn about invasive crabs, to annual salt marsh studies, there's never a dull moment in her class!

Mrs. Kane

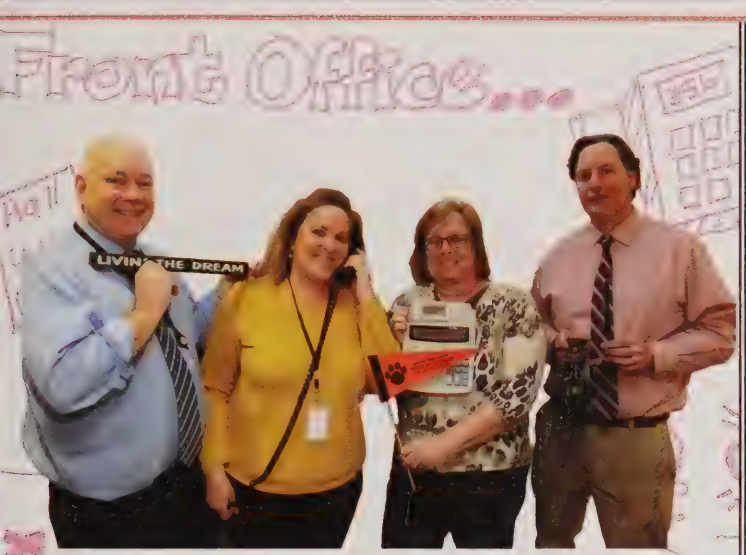

Mrs. Kane was always convinced she was going to pursue a career as a ballet dancer. She took dance classes in New York City and was committed to her lifestyle. When Mrs. Kane was told she was too tall to pursue a dancing career, she didn't let that discourage her. Later she realized teaching might be a good fit when she interned at Shakespeare's Globe Theater in London. There, she saw how "really amazing Shakespearians taught each other and learned from each other." This lured her away from dance and into teaching.

Ms. Pepe

Most people don't know Ms. Pepe lived in Alaska for 6 years while her husband was in grad school. Her love of making art and learning new things from her students "as long as they're willing to teach," drove her to become an art teacher.

Each year Ms. Pepe's passion for art is renewed by the diverse students in her classroom. She enjoys helping them express themselves through new and different art forms that continue to fill the walls and display cases down Main Street.

Faces of Summer

Brother and sister, Rayna and Max Duffield, enjoy the 90 degree weather of Sonoma, California.

Students, Owen Tracy and Shelby Mariano, enjoy a fun-filled day at Gillette Stadium watching the NCAA Lacrosse Finals. Owen said, "This was the most intense lacrosse game I have ever watched."

On Sebec Lake in Maine, Rowan Galanis and Anna Mossler, lounge on the hammock before racing around on the jet ski. "I love going to the lake house every summer, we always have a wonderful time" said Rowan.

"I'll never forget the countless days my friends and I spent out on the boat."
Grace Quinn, Senior

At Gillette Stadium, students Nadja Ueckert-LaPlante and Anna Davis, get their country on at a Thomas Rhett concert. "It was the greatest concert I have ever been to. I would love to see him again" said Anna.

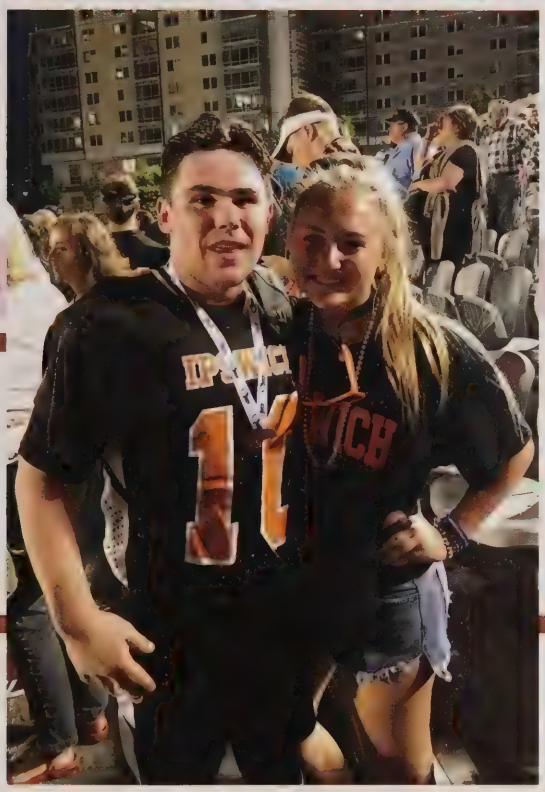

Castles, Concerts, and Collaborations

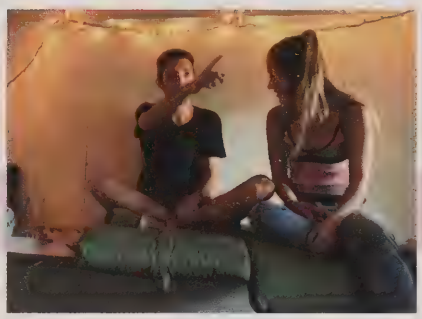

Most Ipswich Tigers spent the Summer of 2017 enjoying all Ipswich has to offer. What is Summer in Ipswich without swimming at Cranes Beach, sunset at Pavilion, or jumping off the labor-in-vain bridge after a long day in the sun? Current senior, Andrea Stone, said "I wanted to enjoy the time I had at the beach with my friends and family before college."

After spending time on the sand, many students went to work. Some popular workplaces for Ipswich students are DQ, Vinwood Catering, and Ipswich Ale Brewer's Table. Senior Kate O'Kelly, said, "My coworker and I entertained ourselves with numerous games of hangman and singing Michael Jackson," during their five and a half hour shifts.

The summer was successful for entrepreneurs Jake Wile and Blake Emerson who started their landscaping business, "The Backyard Barbers" when Blake was twelve. Over the years, he has grown his business into a thriving enterprise. In order to be hired for their business, they require "friends they trust to get the job done." It's easy to spot the Backyard Barbers driving through Ipswich with their matching trucks and trailers full of equipment. It's just an average day at Ipswich High if you pull into the parking lot and see the "truck squad" already at school hanging out by their cars. Overall, this summer was a memorable one and many Ipswich High students will remember.

At the peak of Mount Major in New Hampshire, seniors, Tommy Herron, Alex Bruhm, Pat Gillis, and Cowan McCormick stop to savor their accomplishment.

1. Friends, Amanda Buchanan, Margaret Kimball, and Charlotte Stedfast celebrate Margaret's 17th birthday in downtown Newburyport.

2. Olivia Corcoran and Andrea Stone hike along Halibut Point in Rockport.

3. After spending way too much money on half-price sushi, seniors, Ava Hoog and Claudia Bauman, say cheese outside of The Studio Restaurant in Gloucester.

THE HIGH SCHOOL EXPERIENCE

Jonah Orroth is a freshman here at IHS and he recently shared his thoughts on the "high school experience" and how he's been adjusting to high school life.

The biggest change from middle school for Jonah was going to different areas of the school for his classes instead of just staying in one pod.

The biggest common misconception he finds false is that upperclassmen are really mean and don't help you. In fact, "They're actually really nice," and he's made lots of upperclassmen friends.

The hardest thing about high school has been the increased work load.

Jonah is on the cross country and track team and he says they're a lot more serious and intense than the middle school teams. "There's this extra layer of intensity. It's a lot harder, but also more fun".

Jonah sums up his high school experience as all around "Much much better than middle school."

German ROOTS

Speaking two languages is tough for many people, but for freshman Melanie Powers, it is a big part of her life. She can speak German fluently and "enjoys speaking it as much as she can." She has traveled to Germany three times and attends a German school every Saturday. Melanie represents German culture by celebrating "Fasching," a carnival-like event where her family dresses up and gets to goof around for a day. Melanie's favorite part of German culture is all the different types of food and the architecture. When asked if she wants to travel back to Germany one day she said "yes because I really enjoy their culture."

MIND Over Matter

Gymnastics is a hard sport: gymnast Lily Ramsdell would know, for she has come close to fracturing her spine. She has been doing gymnastics ever since she was 7, and now does 20 hours of practice a week. She can do various tricks, such as a standing back tuck and back handsprings. Her impressive moves have scored her first place in states and third in regionals. Executing tricks isn't just a matter of knowing the moves, but facing the mental fear of falling and hurting yourself. While learning tricks is "hard and you get frustrated," the feelings of triumph and happiness after make it all worth it.

COMPOSING CHALLENGES

Contrary to popular belief, sophomore Julian Colville doesn't have perfect pitch. He jokes that he instead has "imperfect pitch," but he is often able to call out a note and which key it's in. He not only plays the piano, clarinet, and guitar, but also sings and writes music. In fact, he even composed a piece back in eighth grade for the middle/high school band. When writing music he often wonders, "What if I did x instead of y?" and believes that exploring and trying new things is "half the battle when you're trying to compose music."

Strong Strides

It's Luke Dione's first year running cross country and he's already taken over the number four spot for the boys' team. Luke went out for cross country because he wanted to try a new sport, and he is glad he did so. He has excelled this XC season and pushed himself. Luke believes "You didn't have a complete race if you didn't finish strong." He attributes his success to his teammates, for they've encouraged him and have been the "most supportive team" he's ever been on.

SUMMER IN GREECE

Think our summer was hot? Try spending five weeks in 100 degree weather, like Raphaella Pastos did this summer in Greece. She went to Greece to attend the baptism ceremony for her baby cousin. One thing that stood out to her was all of the hospitality and patience the locals showed her. The thing she loved most about her trip was being able to "see where [her] parents were from," and describes her trip as "really eye opening."

Power of the Freestyle

Joanna Mullen is not your average swimmer; she swims seven to eight times a week. This includes waking up at 5 am in the morning to swim three times a week before school. Her 200m freestyle relay team currently holds the school's record, and some believe they will break all three relay records this season. Her favorite thing about the team is their ability to work together to improve each other, and she swims by the motto "Positive mind, positive life."

Gardy, Party of Two

In the classroom, he may be a nice guy, but on the court he's a tennis menace. Declan O'Flynn just might be the best tennis player this school has ever seen.

Declan has been playing tennis since he was five years old. Originally he preferred baseball and basketball, but he quickly grew to love the sport and has become more interested in tennis. Unlike the large team-based sports he played when he was younger, Declan likes the self-reliant nature of tennis. He doesn't have to worry about letting any teammates down or rely on other players. "You're out there on your own, you have to correct your own mistakes," says Declan. "You rely on yourself." Declan plays tennis year round. He has won numerous tournaments and is currently ranked 40th in the eighteen and under division of New England.

It comes as no surprise that the O'Flynn's share more than a name. The father son duo shares a passion for tennis. Gardy played tennis as a kid, but unlike Declan, he pursued baseball. At the end of the day, Declan enjoys having his father by his side in school, and the feeling, like the name, is mutual.

Tastes Like Home

Nearly ten years ago Shao Qiu's family traveled across the world from one sandy shore to another in search of the perfect home. Since then he has become a familiar face in Ipswich. What some don't know, is that Shao has only lived in the United States for eight years. Born in Fujian, China, Shao spent the first half of his life on an island off the coast of mainland China. Shao lived a pleasant life on the island, routinely indulging in local cuisine including rice and crabs. Shao lived with his extended family while his father worked long hours as a fisherman. Seeking a better life, Shao's father decided to take his chances in America and moved his family to New York City, in the hope of finding a job he had more passion for. In 2009, Shao left his homeland and came to America. Life in New York was tough for Shao who had to adapt to new customs and new language. Nevertheless, Shao was able to learn English in a very short time. "I learned English in like three months," said Shao. "I didn't learn any in China. I had to learn it once I got to New York."

Months later, Shao and his family were looking for a beachy vacation spot in Massachusetts. Intrigued by the name Ipswich, they felt compelled to visit our historic town. While vacationing in Ipswich, Shao's family came across a building for sale downtown. They saw an opportunity in an ideal location for a restaurant and a dream job for the entire family. Liking what they saw, Shao and his family moved to Ipswich, opening up the soon-to-be local hot spot: Good Taste. The Chinese restaurant quickly grew in popularity, and after seven long years Shao's family was able to buy a house and move out of their apartment.

Today Shao is a beloved member of the school community, and after seven years in Ipswich Shao says, "I sometimes miss my home in China but I've grown to like Ipswich too, much more than New York."

FOOTBALL

WE ARE TIGERS

All on the Line

Coach Kevin Fessette preaches one thing to his tenacious offensive line before every game: "No one will ever know what you do, but it is the most important aspect of the game." Although many spectators are quick to key in on the athletic running backs streaking down the sideline and the nimble quarterback bouncing in and out of the pocket, they might not notice offensive line.

Key contributors on the state championship lacrosse team, Senior offensive linemen Kevin Swenson and Aidan McAdams bring speed and agility off the line. Such tenacity has been instrumental to the Tiger's success in the running game this year.

Without a place to go though, speed alone won't get the backs anywhere. Veterans Caleb Comeau and Kieran McCormack use brute strength to force turnovers and create gaping holes for the running backs. According to Comeau, the lack of public glory doesn't bother him. "It's good to know the team and coaches recognize how much work we put in."

For this group of guys success on the turf began in the weight room during the off season. Seniors Pete Spinale and Christian Fabbri, and sophomore Will Ginolfi round out the squad. On any given day this off season a casual observer would likely have found Spinale, Fabbri, and Ginolfi in the weight room. As a result, the Tigers offense has exploded this year, putting up 54 points in the "Beef Bowl" against Georgetown, and scoring 42 in a must-win game over Amesbury.

Despite little glory and lack of newspaper appearances, the Tigers' offensive line continues to stand tall, pounding opponents and leading the Tigers to their third straight playoff appearance in three years.

CHEER WE ARE TIGERS

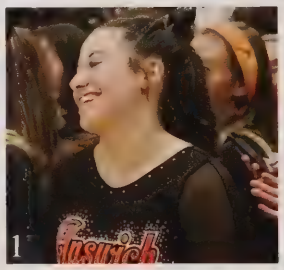

Can't Hide Our Pride

Friday means one thing for the Ipswich High cheerleaders: game day. Friday nights yield some of their fondest memories. From welcoming the football team onto the new turf, to push-ups after touchdowns, these are the things that bond this team together. Captain Aisha Gahm-Diaz said "The games hype us up and help us focus on hitting clean motions and timing, as well as improve our voices."

While push-ups on Friday nights prepare them to take the mat at competitions, it's evident how much work these girls put in outside of games. Not only did they take home first place at their first competition, but also grand champs. Winning competitions isn't something new for them, but with fresh uniforms last year, this year's cheer team feels ready for anything.

When asked how their season was affected by the loss of last year's seniors, captain Haley Williams said "I think we lost some strong people, especially tumbling wise, but we've gained new leadership and have a positive attitude toward everyone." These girls aim to succeed whether working hard as a team for their seventh consecutive first place CALS or building stronger friendships. Embodying what it means to be a Tiger, the Ipswich High Cheerleaders show their pride through their exuberant spirit and drive for success.

GIRLS WE ARE TIGERS XC

Smiles for Miles

3.1 miles, 5 kilometers, 16,400 feet, 200 clapping hands and 19 speedy runners: These are the numbers behind the Girls XC team.

Noura Rayes, 3 year veteran on the team and this year's captain, decided to join the team her sophomore year and has loved it ever since. "When I made the choice to join XC I really didn't know what to expect. I knew that I loved running and I was just kind of curious as to where it would take me."

Although the courses are different every time, two things always stay the same: They are 3.1 miles long, and "As a team we all run it together and push ourselves to do our best."

Though she loves running, one of her favorite parts is the warmup called the "Sun Stretch." During this warm up runners lay in the sun and rest before their race.

For Noura, cross country is full of things she loves, but she has her favorites. "One of the most exciting things about running cross country is that there are so many different trails to explore," and "Running once all the leaves have changed color in the fall." Noura's favorite part about the team itself is the amount of positivity and support shared between them throughout the season.

Four-Course King

Not everyone appreciates the discipline it takes to be a successful long distance runner. For many, running is a tedious chore. Although relatively new to cross country, Ipswich senior Kellen Waters has quickly ascended through the ranks to become king of the course.

Joining cross country his junior year, Kellen is now in his second year of cross country as the number one runner. He holds four course records for Ipswich, including the overall record for Ipswich's home course at Cranes. However, these records didn't just happen. Kellen is the quintessence of discipline, training regularly. On race days he makes sure he doesn't eat anything four hours prior to running, and always does his signature warm up jumps on the starting line.

Kellen's favorite part about cross country is that JV and varsity get to run together in meets, and both get to experience the same course despite varying abilities.

In spite of all his success, Kellen's perspective on records and winning is refreshing. He believes "It doesn't matter where you finish in a race. Just knowing you pushed yourself as hard as you could matters most."

What lies ahead for Kellen? As usual, he plans stay the course. Kellen will run next fall at UMass Lowell where he will no doubt continue to push himself as he pursues his running career in college.

GIRLS WE ARE TIGERS SOCCER

A Five-Star Team

Tightly-knit, accomplished, and full of personality, the members of the girl's varsity soccer team this year are not to be underestimated; just because they're sweet doesn't mean that they don't pack a punch. The key ingredient in their recipe is the fact that players reign across the field as both an "all-inclusive, good-natured" family, as claimed by freshman Lauryn Whynott, as well as seasoned athletes individually. As one of three ninth-grade students who've turned heads with their positions on the highly-regarded team, Whynott found that she was gradually able to earn her place both on the field and in the hearts of her fellow players with the assistance of Coach Courtney Penta, who strove to "push the freshmen to engage with seniors," and "valued respect above all else." Many teammates, while rooted to the sidelines from injury, cheered "louder than the audience at times," and truly "stepped up as motivators," said junior Sophie Harmon.

Although they are ambitious and teeming with athleticism, it's not as if these girls are only programmed to dominate a field—they know how to have fun, too! Grace Evans, one of the team's three captains, was quick to share a few of the team's more intimate moments together, like how an early morning practice "ended in the team having a dance circle and playing obnoxious music." Evans also added how "bridge jumping after practice," following an intense sprinting competition between the players, was "the perfect way to bond." By doing so, these girls leap outside of their comfort zones even while off the field—sometimes into the waters of Labor and Vain.

As the curtains closed on this year's season, it had become clear that these ferocious Tigers were ready to sink their teeth into an all new era, prepared to serve up their best performance yet.

Bright Lights, Big Spikes

Sand, four players, a yellow ball, and a small trampoline. Have any idea what this sport might be? Like most people, probably not. Known as spikeball, the Shark Tank phenomenon has evolved from a laid back beach game into a college club sport.

On the soccer field Senior Captain Cowan McCormick is a motivator, team player, and role model for his teammates. However people don't always realize that Cowan's passion for team camaraderie extends beyond the soccer field. Cowan is part of a competitive spikeball team that competes nationwide in tournaments ranging from Chicago to Washington D.C.

Starting out as only a summer camp hobby, Cowan's passion for spikeball has developed. Between balancing soccer, school work, and college applications, Cowan finds "It's hard to give Spikeball the time he would like to," and he "definitely plans on dedicating more time to it in College, since the Collegiate Spikeball League was recently started." Cowan believes his participation in Spikeball has "certainly improved his footwork and quickness" on the Soccer field and has strengthened his "defensive positioning, communication, and competitiveness."

Under the lights of the IHS soccer field, Cowan is a veteran leader, admired by his underclassmen teammates. When it comes to spikeball, Cowan is often one of the youngest players at tournaments. He is challenged and inspired by his college teammates. However, the dedication he has to both teams remains the same. He says that "he would do anything for his teammates," and he knows they would do anything for him. Cowan believes that "nothing will make your day like a great win," whether it be under the bright lights of the Soccer field, or on the sand at a Spikeball tournament.

FIELD WE ARE TIGERS HOCKEY

Fresh Start,One Heart

For many teams, losing all but two players would be devastating. This year the IHS field hockey team decided to face this reality with one heart. The girls knew rebuilding their team was going to be a challenge, but they had no fear and were ready to conquer the season. In the midst of many challenges, there was one thing on everyone's mind: the trial of playing on the new turf instead of the grass at Bialek Park.

While there are a lot of changes happening, varsity player Maddie Wilson confidently stated, "We are sticking with the old in some ways. Before every game at the end of practice, the whole team will do the cheer 'beat....' filling in the name of the town." This tradition dates back years, making the team very superstitious.

The team also welcomed new players with open arms. Many new freshman quickly bonded and became a part of their motto. With their strong defense working alongside fast midfielders and forwards, freshman Riley Daly scored her first goal of her High School career against rivals Hamilton-Wenham. Even a player's parent said, "The best part is watching the girls play cohesively and winning."

Overall, starting from scratch has been a challenge, but this team has united and represented their motto "one team, one heart."

GOLF
TIGERS

Stepping up to the Tee

After losing 6 seniors from the starting varsity lineup last year, the Ipswich Tigers golf team had no idea what to expect for the 2017-18 season. However, one thing was clear, the Tigers needed their youth to step up and the fill the shoes of those who had graduated.

One of the many young players who fulfilled this duty was sophomore, Andrew Gilligan. Picking up the sport just a year ago with no prior experience playing varsity golf, Gilligan impressed his coaches and teammates, playing his way to the 5th spot out of 8 on the varsity lineup. For anyone who hasn't played competitive golf, the butterflies that swarm your stomach on that first tee box can be overwhelming. "It was nerve-wracking, yet a great time meeting new people and experiencing competitive golf," said Gilligan. Despite the nerves, Gilligan rose to the occasion for his first varsity match, scoring a solid 8 points, rounding out the varsity 6. Working relentlessly to improve his game, the sophomore jumped from the 7th to the 5th spot by the end of the year.

Finishing the season at 5-9, the Tigers missed out on the State Tournament by one match. There were up and downs, struggles and successes, but the young Tigers learned a lot. Despite the sting of missing out on the tournament, the team was proud of their 5 wins, including an upset of the perennial powerhouse, Amesbury Indians. With seven golfers to the varsity lineup next year, led by senior captain Mackenzie Greenleaf, the Tigers will be competing for a Cape Ann League title and a return to the State Tournament.

Block Out Cancer

One of the most enthusiastic and festive fundraisers the girls volleyball team hosts is the Breast Cancer game. With Essex Tech as their opponent, it was time for the team to turn on their energy. An excited Amanda Nardo said that "The Essex Tech game was one of the loudest and most energetic times [she had] ever seen our Ipswich team play." The girls started off with a strong lead, but in the third game the score rose to 25-25. Fighting for the win they knew they deserved, the Ipswich team left all of their energy on the court. Coach Kerri O'Connor said, "The energy and excitement on the court was high as the girls fought to win for each point - playing for one another and for this important cause." After giving it their all the team ended up beating Essex Tech in three sets out of five with a 27-25 win. Not only was this an important win for the Ipswich girls, but they were also able to raise $300 towards breast cancer.

After such a successful fundraiser, the Volleyball team decided to support the Talia Duff foundation with the help of Hamilton Wenham. This is a game that both towns will remember for a very long time. The previously undefeated Hamilton team fell to Ipswich in 3 sets. Captain Grace Quinn said that "During the Hamilton Wenham game, all the girls were giving 110%. When I was on the sidelines they were cheering the loudest of all." This year the team has bonded through their losses and their unpredicted wins. Coach Kerri said the girls "Passed well, hit hard and served consistently with each player showing a perfect effort and giving it their all!" She was also "Very proud of both community teams to come together and support Talia and help cure CMT4J." Their fundraising success has only made their season that much more rewarding as this team made it to the D3 North Championship game.

It Sifts from Leaden Sieves
by Emily Dickinson

It sifts from leaden sieves,
It powders all the wood,
It fills with alabaster wool
The wrinkles of the road.

It makes an even face
Of mountain and of plain, —
Unbroken forehead from the east
Unto the east again.

It reaches to the fence,
It wraps it, rail by rail,
Till it is lost in fleeces,
It flings a crystal veil.

On stump and stack and stem,
The summer's empty room,
Acres of seams where harvests were,
Recordless, but for them.

It ruffles wrists of posts,
As ankles of a queen, —
Then stills its artisans like ghosts,
Denying they have been.

One More Morrissey

One familiar name you'll notice on the varsity roster this year is Morrissey. But no, Killian didn't come back. It's Izzy, his younger brother and newest member of the Morrissey basketball dynasty. Older sister Jordan played before both Killian and Izzy. Now graduated, Killian does what he can to help his brother. Whether playing in the driveway or working out on the court at the gym, the hours of playing brother against brother helped Izzy work on his ball handling. Their time together has also instilled the aggressive style of play the Morrisseys are known for. "They do whatever they can to keep me out. They come to as many of my games as they can," Izzy said about his family. "I try to make them proud when I play."

The Morrissey family has always been active in sports at Ipswich. Jordan (2015), and Killian (2017) both excelled on their teams. Now the torch has been passed to Izzy, who continues to strive for excellence in typical Morrissey fashion. If history holds true, we can expect to enjoy watching a few more thrilling seasons unfold.

Senior Christian Layousse is focused on successfully winning the game along with his team.

More Than Just a Basketball Team

For many basketball legends, the old [illegible] and Larry Bird as most teams, being balanced and well rounded is the key to long term prosperity and success. On paper, it's impossible to differentiate the Ipswich High School girls basketball team from any other small school team in the Cape Ann league. However, looking at a team's record and roster is a superficial form of judgment. In order to get a real sense of a team's success and character, you need to break through the surface and dig deeper. In doing so, one can see just how unique this team really is.

What sets apart the 2017-18 Ipswich Girls Varsity basketball team from others in the North Shore is their diversity and well roundedness. The team is composed of academically and athletically driven student athletes who differ in their activities, interests and participation in other sports. However, passion and expertise in different areas allows the Lady Tigers to have depth and a wide range of knowledge and skill. Most teams are fairly uniform in character and composition, yet the Tigers couldn't be more different. The quintessence of this team's versatility is represented by senior captain, Deirdre O'Flynn. "We all understand each other on and off the court, because we support each other in clubs, academics, and sports alike," said O'Flynn. Other than being an overachieving student and a member of National Honors Society, Deidre is a three sport varsity athlete, and captain of each of her teams. As many know from experience, being a varsity student athlete is a hectic. When asked about her demanding schedule, O'Flynn remarked, "Managing time is hard but it allows me to structure my day. Balancing an overwhelming workload and a rigorous athletic schedule presents immense obstacles that take sheer perseverance and fortitude to overcome. However, the Lady Tigers always find a way to come together, and subsequently, overcome any obstacle in their way.

At Home in the Deep

"If you have a lane, you have a chance"

Some people say we don't live without it, some people say it is our enemy. Something that is so violent and uncontrollable can also be very inviting and calm. Many unknowns dwell beneath watery depths, but for some, it is home.

While she stands on the block with her hands dangling above her toes, she can feel the suspense build through the pool deck. All of her thoughts are about the water below her. For two teammates, this high energy and competitive environment has been a big part of high school. Over the last three years, Senior Zoe Ciarametaro has experienced the impact of high school swimming and all that it has to offer. "I think the people on this team are a great group. Everyone is supportive and down to earth," Zoe said.

Although there is a team component in practicing together through the season, personal performance matters. Swimming, like track, is an individual sport. Your success is your own. Although some might think this an odd contrast to team traditional team sports, achieving high standards to beat your personal time is gratifying and fun. "The feeling of accomplishment is rewarding," Senior Adam Cotnoir says after swimming one of the hardest events, the 200 IM.

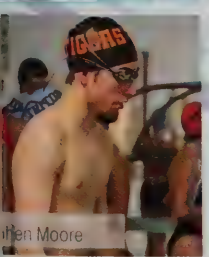

For the Tigers, swimming is a great stress reliever. Adam agrees. "Practice is a huge stress reliever between AP classes and extracurriculars," he said. For these swimmers water is the breeding ground for team building, individual goal setting, and an opportunity to meet new friends and gain unforgettable memories.

"Push yourself to your limits. Don't worry about anyone else, because if you go out and give it your all, you have nothing to worry about and you'll do great."

-Mike D'Agostino

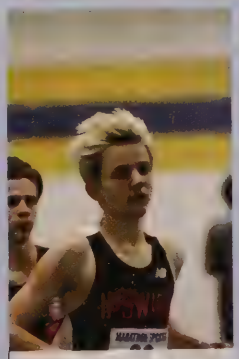

Mike started running track his freshman year, following in the footsteps of his older brother Dan, who ran track before him. "Originally I was going to play basketball," he says, but instead wound up doing track. Needless to say, Mike has been remarkably successful. He runs the 55m dash and competes in the long jump. He has been a mainstay on the team. Last spring he led the team with an impressive 122 points and a ton of All-Stars. And, like every man, Mike has his weaknesses. "I'm pretty mentally challenged and a bit socially awkward," he joked. However, his weaknesses certainly haven't held him back. Mike currently holds the record for the 4x1 relay dash at a blazing 4.98 seconds. His goal for this season is to break the record once again and plans on doing so through hard work. After high school, his track career will be coming to an end as he heads off to college. After college, he plans on pursuing a career in the real estate field.

Water sports

Most graduates of Ipswich High School leave to embark on exciting adventures across the country in college. Many expect their experiences to make them well-rounded, competitive in the job market, and successful in their careers. Sometimes though, we forget just how well-rounded we are before crossing the town line to head for the world beyond Ipswich.

With the vast majority of students participating in at least one sport, music, clubs, and a full academic load, one might be surprised we have time for anything else. The reality is quite the opposite. Many students take full advantage of what makes New England a destination for vacationers across the country. Crane Beach comes alive with paddleboarders like senior Max Ostiguy, boaters, fishermen, and swimmers as soon as the weather warms the sand. Whether water skiing like Meghan O'Connor, or slaying stripers with Nate Rogers, the watershed of Ipswich offers endless fun, excitement, and relaxation.

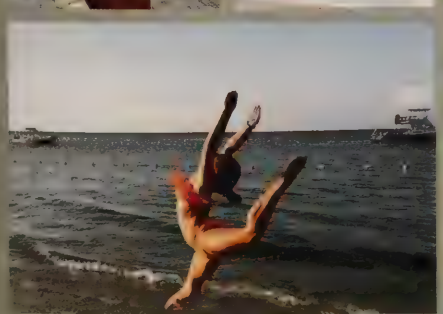

The beach isn't the only place Ipswichians strut their stuff. Many feel more at home in the gym than on the water. Senior Alisha Gatun Diaz, junior Sean Kirwan, and freshman Lucy Pell found their niches on their respective mats. A competitive gymnast from early on, Alisha competes alongside Lucy with the TigerFish, a collaborative team shared by Ipswich and Newbury. Sean, part of the Kirwan wrestling legacy, wrestles for the Ipswich-Georgetown team. Other students like Grace Grotnik, Eva Lorenz, Noura Reyes, and Abby Mabee prefer to spend their free time on the backs of their horses. Whether jumping, riding, or playing polo, these ladies treasure the time they spend with their prized animals.

In keeping with Ipswich's excellence in performing arts, many students extend their participation beyond band, chorus, orchestra, and theater. Senior Laura Liddle and Dillon Russell, as well as underclassmen Kayla Lodan and Abby Stasiak, all participate in competitive dance programs. Whether through school activities or independent tradition, students of Ipswich demonstrate the persistence and tenacity that has become characteristic of our community.

Life on the Ice

Imagine having to wake up at four in the morning for a cold hour-long practice. Six boys who play hockey for Ipswich have to do this every week during the winter. These boys have been playing hockey since they were in kindergarten, many of them starting on the frozen ponds around town, or on their own ice rinks they have in their backyard. This tight-knit team consists of Rockport, Manchester-Essex, and mainly Ipswich players, including Captains Will Zambernardi and Christian Fabbri, along with Jake Wile, Nate Hyde, Nick Fonzi, Max Kivekas, and Rowan Silva. Although they started off with some tough losses, they eventually came back and pulled through to end the season with some thrilling wins.

Although the boys' co-op team is comprised largely of Ipswich players, there are only two Ipswich girls who play for the Beverly/Danvers team. Senior Jordan Kimmel and Freshman Cayla Greenleaf add support and intensity to their team. Only a sophomore, Cayla starts for the team. Jordan, a senior, shares the goalie position with another teammate. Together the two Ipswich girls have grown a strong bond and made many new friends with their new teammates.

SPRING Sports

Rain or Shine

Spring sports have always faced three big challenges. Rain, mud, and cold weather. Many sports have to reschedule their games because of the rain. On top of that, the season always starts later than planned because of all the snow on the ground, which results in countless indoor practices in the gym. The softball and baseball teams spend much of their season practicing inside because the fields are flooded from the snow and the rain. "The rain always impacts our games, because if the field is muddy we can't play. We're always rescheduling at the last minute," senior Ali Comeau said.

Track also deals with fierce spring conditions. What is track without standing around in the rain and shivering? The cold weather reminds us that summer is just around the corner, and soon everyone will be competing in the hot sun. Once warmer, lacrosse gets in all the practice they can outside. Senior Meghan O'Connor said, "In lacrosse we all work together to achieve our goals of becoming united and winning games." Whether standing in puddles on the track, or sliding across the lower gym floor, all spring athletes know competing in spring requires a special commitment

STATE CHAMPIONS

Unrivaled Siblings

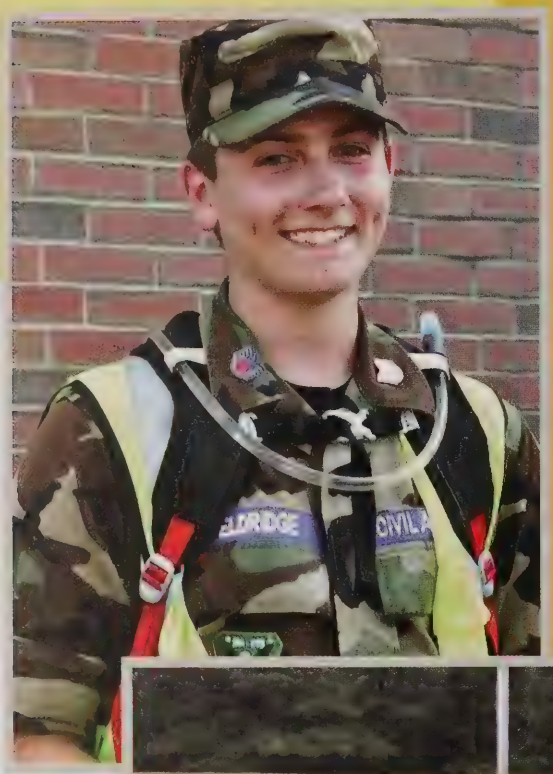

Whether it's fighting over a sweatshirt, or the last slice of pizza at the diner table, most siblings are inclined to battle. Such petty quarrels are, more often than not, just part of growing up. When it comes to the brothers on the Ipswich Boys Lacrosse team, they put their quarrels aside in service to a higher purpose. Although not much is shared between Charlie and Pat, or Killian and Isaiah at home, the one thing they battled for together and brought home to share was a State Title.

Brothers Charlie and Pat Gillis, all arguments aside, ran on the same midfield line with close friend and longtime teammate Tommy Ginolfi. This trio accounted for 77 assists and 114 goals. Brothers Isaiah and Killian Morrissey clearly had no issues and were also huge factors, Killian being the leading scorer of the team as well as Cape Ann League player of the year. Isaiah using his lightning speed to clear the ball for the Tigers. Kevin Swenson and Aidan McAdams, who began their careers as second graders, were also instrumental. Aidan was a brick wall in net, and Kevin added a number of goals to complete the high-scoring season.

Family continues to run deep in the Ipswich Lacrosse program. Kerri O'connor was able to coach both her daughters Meghan and Haley this year in a valiant effort at the North Final Championship. The girls high powered offense pushed them deep into the playoffs where they fell short in a nail biter against Newburyport, the only team they lost to all season. Senior leadership will be key this year from captains Meghan O'Connor and Grace Quinn who claims "We've done it before and our returning players are ready to push our team to make it far into the playoffs." Young talent is not in short supply either, as sophomores Haley O'Connor and Annie Gillis provide a dangerous offensive attack.

WHAT WE DO

CIVIL AIR PATROL

Most students are lucky enough to have a seat with a window view. Others have their seats 2,000 feet in the air. Junior Aaron Eldridge is a Squadron First Sergeant in the Civil Air Patrol. THis year marks his his three year anniversary of joining the CAP. Looking back he recalls hearing about the program and immediately being interested. "I had always wanted to something with the military and I had always wanted to fly. I didn't even hesitate, I asked her to sign me up that day." Aaron's responsibilities include arranging and participating in exercises with fellow cadets.

MUSIC

The Starving Musicians Fund is a group most at IHS are familiar with one way or another. Composed of both Ipswich high alumni and current students, the band came together and has performed all over the North Shore. Putting on performances at the school and nonprofit events, there's no gig to humble or to crazy they won't take .

DANCE

Kayla Laddin, sophomore at IHS, discovered her passion for dancing at an early age. She started classes at the local YMCA at age 8 and still dancing at age 15. She now teaches free classes every weekend to children between the ages of 7-8. "It gets me up Saturday morning, it's just so much fun to work with the kids."

A Night to Remember

The Perfect Prom Experience

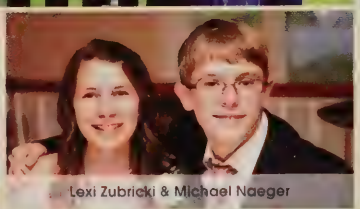

With clear skies and warm temperatures, the junior class couldn't have asked for better weather on their special day. They strolled down the aisle during promenade in their stunning gowns and stylish tuxedos. After posing for lots of photos and indulging in small appetizers outside, they made their way into the Hellenic Center for dinner and dancing.

IPSWICH HIGH STEAM

Ever since its development in 2006 by researcher Georgette Yakman, the popularity of STEAM based education has skyrocketed around the world. Across the country the components of STEAM (Science, technology, engineering, arts, and math) have been integrated into high school curriculums and evolved into the modern building blocks of academic success. When asked about the importance of STEAM in education, Principal Dalton explains that "there is a nationwide shortage of candidates qualified for careers in math, engineering, and computer programming; professional fields that are exploding." It is important that through new curriculums, teaching methods, and collaborative opportunities, Ipswich students and staff are encouraged to see the value of STEAM fields.

"The traditional model of education where the teacher teaches, the students listen and are assessed is no longer relevant. 21st century careers call for creative, flexible, thinkers who are used to collaborating and managing their own time. The focus as a nation and for our school is to provide the opportunity for students to participate in real world problem solving. By integrating STEAM based curriculums into our high school, Ipswich students have been able to go beyond the classroom, and opportunity often only offered to college students.

Our IHS Sustainability Scholars have seen first hand the benefits of reaching out to the community and promoting change through a year long independent project. Seniors Eva Trainer, Chloe Russell, and Paula Schneiders are determined to reduce the use of plastic straws in Ipswich. In order to spread the word to local businesses and restaurants, the girls have been reaching out to local business owners and have gained support from Zumis Espresso. Senior Eva Trainer feels that "through collaborating with Zumis and securing support from other Ipswich businesses, I think I have become more confident in my ability to present my ideas to adults and speak about something I am passionate about." The Sustainability Scholars are only one example of a class that has embodied the elements of STEAM.

Although students work independently and manage their own time in a project-based curriculum, it can be challenging for teachers to step back and allow students to be self-reliant. Principal Dalton explains that "the challenge for teachers is working in a way that is different from a regular classroom; designing real work, self management, and organization. Teachers need to learn how to let go, but real world learning can be messier. Kids need to make mistakes, and teachers need to help them learn from those mistakes."

In the eyes of Mr. Dalton, the goal of STEAM is to provide students with the building blocks necessary for academic success. Teachers in Ipswich want students to feel like they have all the tools necessary to succeed and the opportunity to do anything they want to do. STEAM-based learning empowers kids to be leaders, and ultimately, shape the future.

To The Class of 2018:

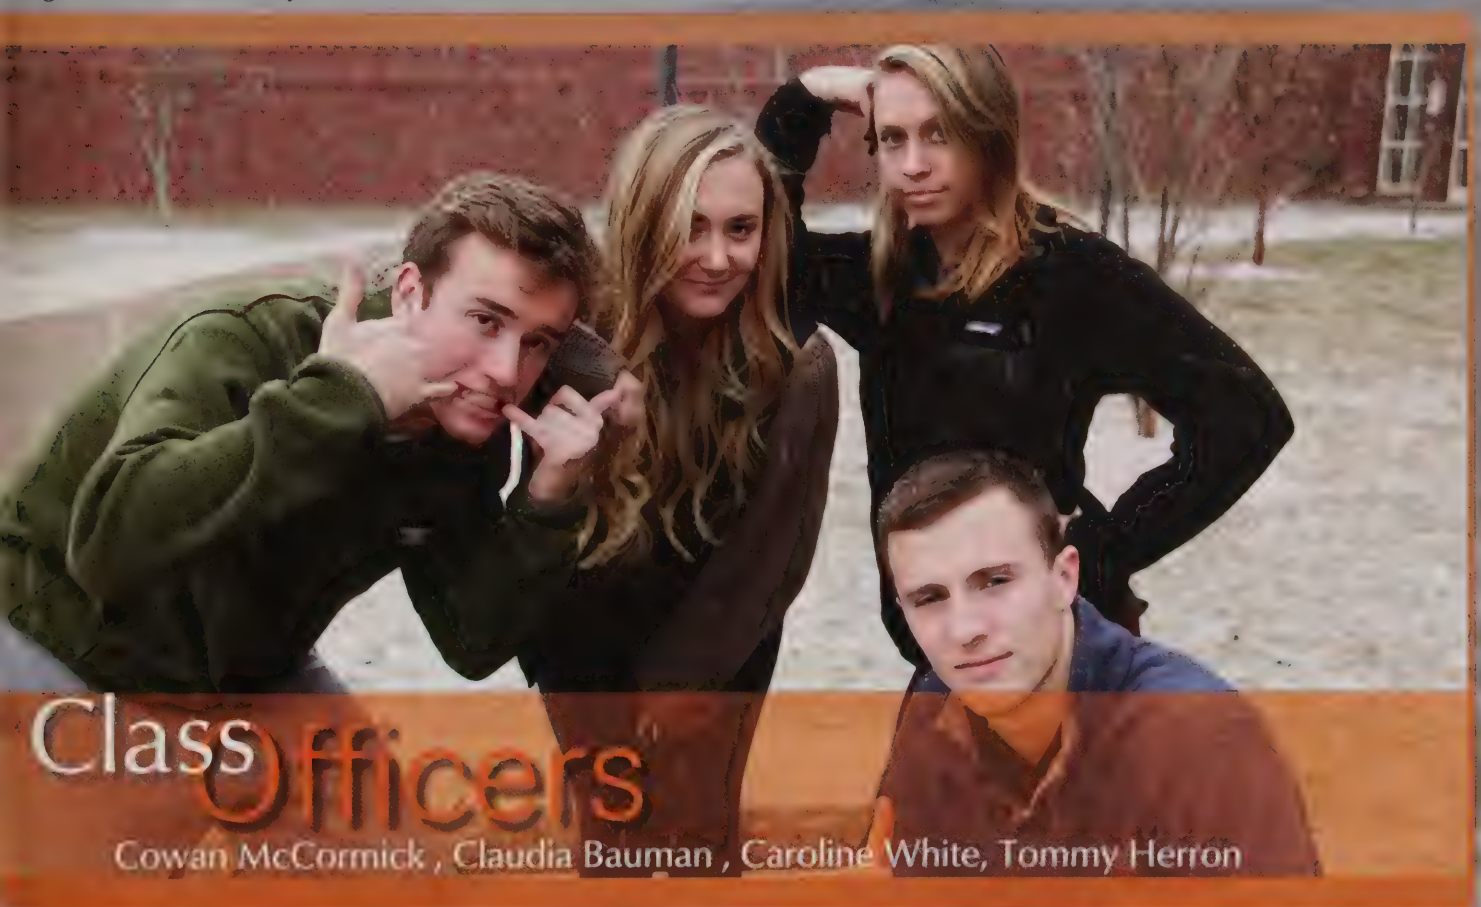

Many told us that the time in high school would fly by, but we didn't really understand just exactly what that meant. It has become more clear as it truly seems like yesterday when we transitioned to the other side of the building and to our new high school entrance. We made this transition with ease; our youth and anticipation allowing us to expect change and to tackle it head-on. We would soon learn that change is not always easy, but seemed to become a recurring theme for us as the years went on in high school.

We figured out that we would learn more in high school than just academics. We may have started to discover interests and talents previously unknown. We became more fine-tuned to specific interests that defined each of us; whether with different clubs, activities, even friends, in order to figure out what worked best for each of us. Through it all, we actually mastered skills that we will use for the rest of our lives.

One critical skill that we've learned is the ability to adapt. One example is through the rapid changes in technology, which lead to many changes in the way we prepared and studied for our classes. Whether it was using Google Classroom or doing homework and classwork on cell phones or other electronic devices, it was a dramatic change in our education journey and it is constantly evolving.

Next year we'll be sailing on uncharted waters. My hope is that you find yourselves on a path that makes you happy as you embark on your specific journey. The great thing is that you can "adjust your sail" at any time and choose a different path or even create a new path. One thing is certain though, we will always be faced with change. Our ability to adapt will definitely help to lead us to success all throughout our lives.

May you always enjoy your journey, remain adaptable, and stay the course to whatever goals and interests you hope to achieve. Remembering, through it all all, to always keep that eye of The Tiger.---------Tommy Herron

Culture of Caring

After thirty three years in education, longtime principal David Dalton is taking his leave for retirement. Students, faculty, and the community at large will miss his kindheartedness, passion for education and the environment, and his desire to affect change in the lives of his students.

Three and a half decades ago Mr. Dalton came to Ipswich to teach biology. Bringing experience in lab science to the classroom, Dalton sought to engage all students in meaningful learning, empowering them to think critically about their world and make a difference. Through science, Dalton believes students can come to appreciate their role in making a better world. "My mission is tied to my personal love of the planet. I love everything to do with the environment," he said. However, teaching science is more than just loving the planet to him. Dalton believes in the importance of "Teaching people to be stewards of our environment, and in extension, stewards of our community." Having spent so much time here, Dalton feels a special connection to Ipswich, and it is his own sense of stewardship that has keept him going. "Ipswich has such a special place. I feel like I've been accepted by the community and gained their trust. I'm so proud of the partnerships we've made outside of school."

Striving to make a difference in the environment has been rewarding, but for Dalton, some of the most memorable moments in his career have come from impacting students' lives. Dalton recalls building relationships with many students in his role as teacher, and even moreso as vice principal for over a decade. "Some of the most meaningful interactions have come for students with the biggest struggles," he recalls. For Dalton, changing a place has been satisfying, but changing lives has been far more lasting and rewarding.

As his lengthy career comes to an end, Mr. Dalton can't help but see it as another beginning. Much like start and end to the many the school years he spent with us, Dalton looks forward with hope. "I love the beginning of the year because we get to look forward to the rest of the year. But I also love the end because we get to look back at the accomplishments that students have made." Looking back with Mr. Dalton, many of us can appreciate his accomplishments. His fingerprints are on all of our lives, and his legacy will endure long after he leaves. But as we part ways, it's important to take a page frrom his book; we should look forward to the rest of what is to come with hopeful expectation. We should strive to make a difference in our communities, and in the lives of those around us. Best of luck in your retirement Mr. Dalton. You will be deeply missed.

OliviaCorcoran,ShelbyMariano, Kate O'Kelly, and Alli Comeau are three of 28 IHS students who took part in the Close Up Program, an educational offering based in Washington, DC. Heavily immersed in the rich history and culture of our nation's capital, students were able to see democracy in action through participating in a mock Congress. Here, through debating many of today's pressing political issues, they ultimately heightened their understanding as to how these verdicts can change our way of life.

Trip Highlights

"At Customs I said that I didn't touch any wild animals... oops."
- Jessie Harrington

"Dyeing wool was like recreating a rainbow."
- Charlotte Steadfast

"Riding a horse beats driving any day."
- Allie Sanidas

"It was so cool to laugh with somebody in a different language... it was the best part of the trip."
- Ian Barg

French Exchange Students

Washington DC, Closeup Trip

From October 20th to November 2nd, seventeen exchange students from the Lycée Costebelle in Hyères, France also experienced an out-of-country exploit.. in our very own hometown! Senior Erin Brink, a member of one of the global language program's volunteer host families, made quick amis with Clara Marro; a process made simple through her being bilingual, much to Brink's relief and amusement. "When we were shopping this one time, Clara tried testing my French vocabulary on different articles of clothing. She was so chirpy and easy to get along with, to the point of us being comfortable enough to gossip about boys and normal things like that. It was like the small linguistic and wider cultural barrier didn't exist." The two spent their days in many local hot spots accompanied by other hosts, including Russell Orchard, the Crane Estate, Marini Farm's corn maze, and other favorite restaurants around town such as the Choate Bridge Pub, Riverview Pizzeria, and of course, Pomodori's. "Lots of kids from Ipswich, including myself, tend to forget how special our little town is," Brink admits, "but explaining its history and adventuring through it all again with somebody new really opened my eyes. Because of that, plus the opportunity to learn French slang, I would definitely recommend giving the program a shot."

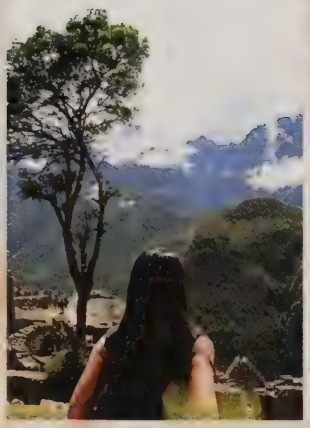

Costa Rica Trip

"Did I almost die? Maybe, but ziplining through Monteverde beats ziplining through New Hampshire any day!"

- Rayna Duffield

Ipswich Travels

Oh the places you'll go...

"You can cram your airline ticket into the depths of a scrapbook, but where it had taken you will never leave your soul." The sentimentality embedded in this phrase jerks at the heartstrings of a select few IHS students, turned zealous explorers through their immersions in foreign worlds. Some basked beneath the hot Costa Rican sun, ziplined through the dense, lush tropics of Monteverde, and experienced firsthand the pleasant influences of cultural hospitality. "I never would have guessed that 'con mucho gusto' would be something that actually resonated with me outside of Spanish class," says sophomore Madison Tuttle, referencing a heavily-used phrase of courtesy within the region. Roughly 1,400 miles away, others found themselves spellbound by the utter beauty and rich Incan history of the Peruvian Machu Picchu. Bathed in the warm glow of a rising sun, the tranquility of the landscape was absolutely unmatchable. That is, unless you're aware of its mystery-shrouded past, like senior Eva Trainer; "the entire civilization had suddenly disappeared so, so long ago," she says, "and it was really special to see what had been left behind for myself."

Setting out to prove that momentous escapades can still be held within a few hour's distance from home, another group of students toured Washington D.C. Here, those well-versed in American history, such as Quinn Comprosky and Barry Giglio, found their fascinations heightened after seeing monuments in real life, as opposed to printed on a page.

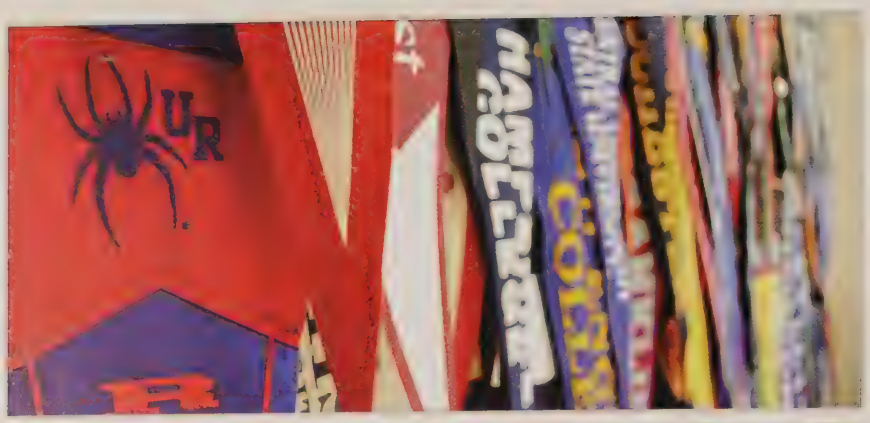

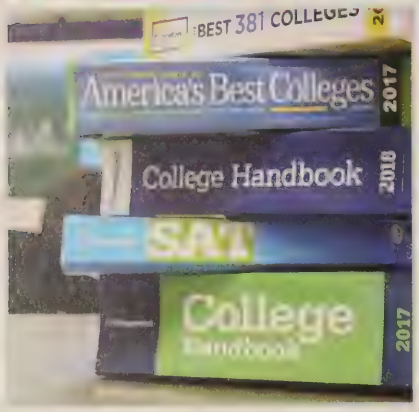

Global Leadership Trip, Peru

"The summit itself was really inspiring and made me think a lot about how much I can help improve the world. Each one of us can have a positive impact on someone else, even if they live on the opposite side of the globe."
- Madeline Wilson

Members of the Global Leadership Trip pose on the iconic Machu Picchu, one of the seven wonders of the world.

Anatomy of a TIGER

What gives Ipswich Tigers their stripes? Seniors Claudia Bauman and Owen Tracy are all Ipswich, from their heads to their claws.

Earbuds: Without a doubt, IHS students are always tuned in to their favorite streaming service or playlist. Just don't get caught with them in the hallways!

Coffee: Whether it's Dunk's, Starbucks, or coffee brought from home in a reusable cup, no morning at IHS would be complete without a signature coffee cup.

Ripped Jeans: Does it make sense to wear these when it's ten degrees outside? Not really, but one can find many IHS girls modeling a pair. The real question is: do we buy them or make them ourselves?

White Sneakers: Every girl at IHS has worn or owns a pair of white sneakers. Don't lie to yourself.

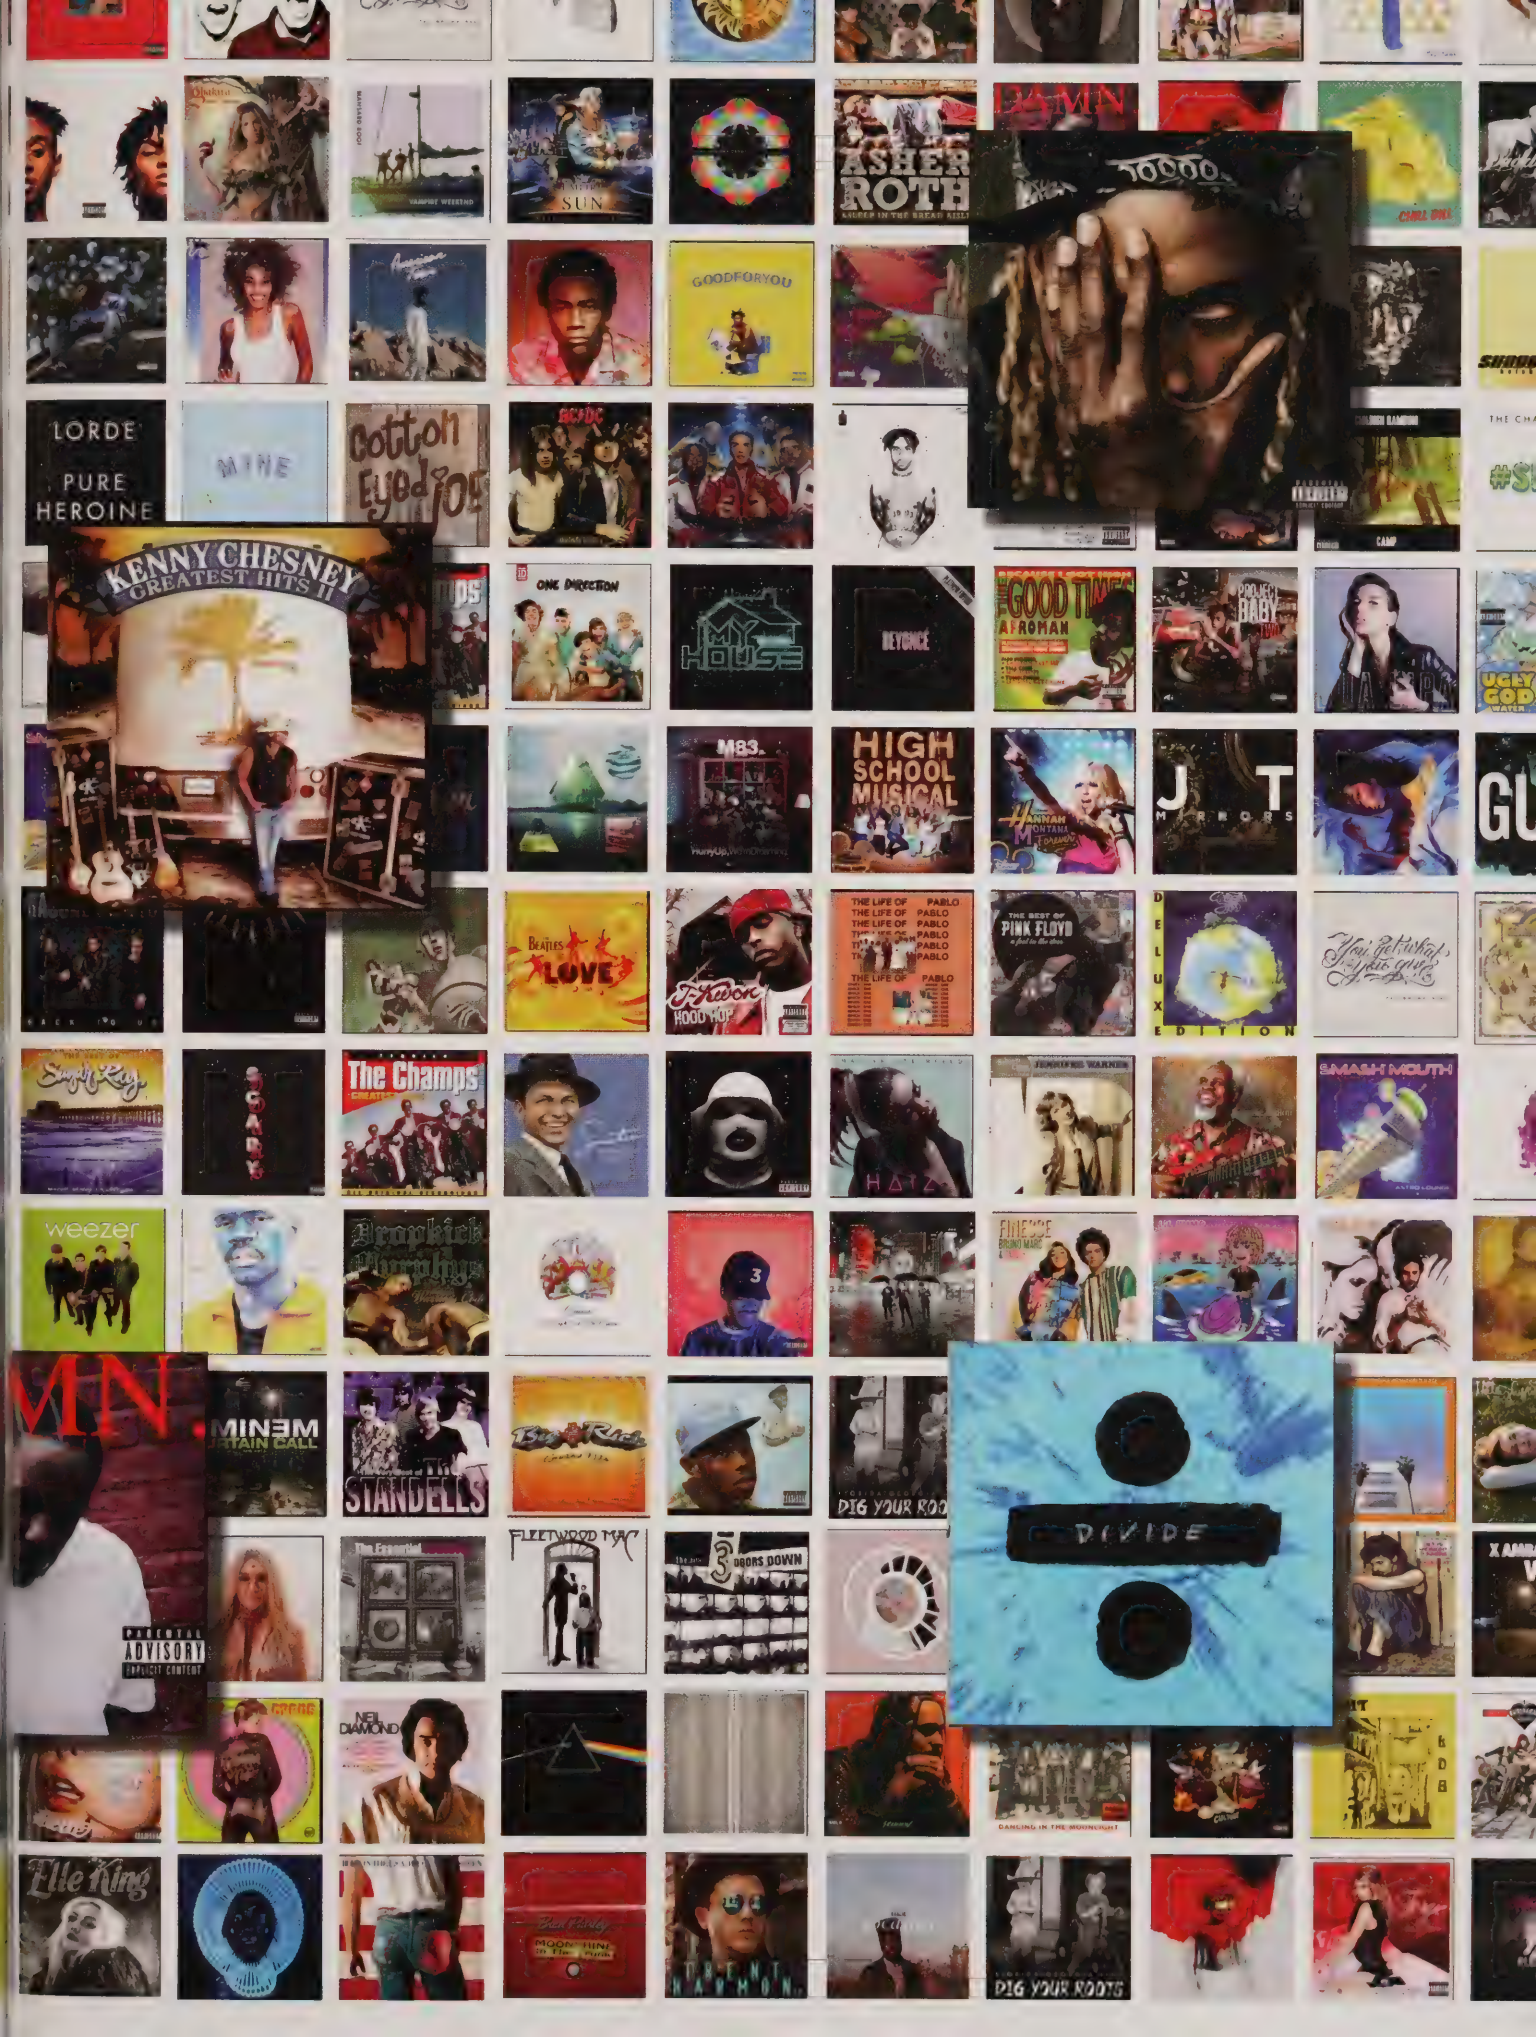

YETI Water Bottle: Owen's personalized YETI water bottle is is a worthwhile accessory for any Tiger. Having name-brand water bottles, whether a Hydro Flask, Camelback, or S'well, is a necessity for Ipswich Tigers. Everyone needs to stay hydrated, right?

North Face Jacket: Owen's burgundy North Face takes the edge off of New England's terrible winter weather. With fleecy jackets and puffy vests of the same brand, Ipswich students never fear the cold—only finals. Yep, only finals.

North Face Backpack: Who needs a locker when you have everything you need in your backpack? Just make sure it fits under your chair...

Nike Roshe Sneakers: These kicks are the key to completing any athleisure-themed outfit, a favored style among Tigers.

Advice to underclassmen

2018 Seniors give advice to underclassmen

1. Don't stress about the things you can't change.

2. Slow down. Enjoy your youth,make the most out of your high school experience

3. Your GPA will follow you for forever, and the work you put into in the classroom now will reflect upon it.

4. That being said, your GPA doesn't reflect who you are as a person. Balance is key.

5. Get involved in extracurricular activities from the beginning. You may discover something you are super passionate about.

6. Don't quit/not go out for certain sports because you think they'll take up too much time

7. Don't "wait for your life to begin" because it's already happening

8. Respect the upperclassmen!!

9. Let your mind travel outside the school curriculum. Dive into your own ideas and follow through with them. Dream.

10. Your GPA will follow you for forever, and the work you put into the classroom now will reflect upon it.

11. Popularity should never be your first priority

12. Get your required gym health etc. classes out of the way early Plan ahead when it comes to what classes you'll take each year.

13. Keep your grades up because when it counts, it will be hard to pick up the slack.

14. Don't be a bum. Dress in somewhat of a presentable fashion. It will make you feel more put together and help you focus

15. Don't focus only on grades A well balanced life is more important

16. Try to take the HARDEST lasses offered at your school. In sports nd extracurricular, work hard and now that you have leadership potential.

17. You are capable of more ıan you realize.

18. EVERYONE is trying to nd themselves. So don't be iscouraged by the people who try to ut you down, and don't give in to the eling that you have to be "just like verybody else." You are NOT alone. ay positive, keep trying, and member that you WILL get through is.

19. The best leaders work quietly ıd let the way they play empower and spire others.

20. Keep your grades up ecause when it counts, it will be hard pick up the slack.

It is not the critic who counts;

*not the man who points out how the strong man stumbles, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who errs, who comes up short again and again, because there is no effort without error and shortcoming; but who does actually strive to do the deeds; who knows great enthusiasms, the great devotions; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who, at the best knows in the end the triumph of high achievement, and who at the worst, if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who neither know victory nor defeat.
